

'Our first project in Darwin was the demolition of the Stokes Hill Power Station in 1997,' McMahon Services NT General Manager Mick Laidler said. 'While our core business in construction, facilities maintenance, asbestos removal and demolition across the NT is ongoing, our all-Territorian team of 60 has the knowledge and skills to work across a broad range of disciplines and sectors. With offices in Darwin, Katherine and Alice Springs, we go to where our clients need us.' The McMahon Services NT team has begun the enabling works for the Darwin Westin Hotel Precinct at the Waterfront. 'Our first package of work includes the construction of the 200m sea wall, which incorporates a promenade pedestrian footpath to allow foreshore access,' Mick said. 'It also includes upgrading the stormwater infrastructure and widening the road between the site and cruise ship terminal. Once complete, it will be an impressive, identifying Darwin landmark. All but one subcontract package will be awarded to local Territory companies, with 60 per cent Indigenous engagement on the works undertaken to date. We're always committed to "Territory Proud, Buy Local", and support local suppliers and contractors.' McMahon is renowned for its can-do service. Since 2011 McMahon Services NT has partnered with Intract Australia Indigenous Contractors through its offices in Darwin, Maningrida and Gunbalanya, hosting students and entry-level job seekers at various locations and teaching them a variety of hands-on construction skills. 'We're proud of our Indigenous workforce in collaboration with Intract. It's second to none,' Mick added. 'We undertake work in remote locations. As a multi-disciplinary, full-service provider, we use our direct wage staff supported by an $80 million network of modern company-owned plant and equipment.' McMahon Services NT is a multi-skilled business with extensive project experience in demolition, civil construction, asbestos removal and management, commercial construction, design and construct, soil remediation, remote contracting, community housing and HAZMAT management. 'Working extensively across all Defence bases in the NT for 10 years, our Federal Safety Accreditation enables us to undertake large-scale Defence infrastructure projects. High-end safety, quality and environmental management systems are paramount in our work,' Mick said. 'We look forward to the future and tackling new challenges with the same enthusiasm, dedication and excellence that has been true of all our operations to date across the Territory.'
