NT Air creates 'next level' adventures and, as the exclusive scenic operator at Litchfield National Park, they can also land anywhere. NT Air is owned and operated by Geoff Morton, or 'Morto', a born-and-bred Territorian. A bachelor who lives in Batchelor, the gateway to Litchfield. 'I just love showing off my backyard,' Morto explains. 'You can't call doing laps of the waterfalls, landing on remote escarpments, swimming in cool, tranquil waterholes and walking around fields of termite mounds work.'

Licensed by NT Parks and Wildlife, NT Air operates all-year round, from Wangi Falls in the dry and Batchelor in the wet. 'We can access and land at sites that are cut off by road in the wet season, and places like Sandy Creek and Lost City that are virtually tourist-free all year, so you have them all to yourself,' Morto says.

If you want a no-fuss sightseeing fix, the Wangi Whirl or Tolmer Turnaround nifty helicopter flights pack a punch. Even though they are quick jaunts, from the moment you lift off, you are presented with unparalleled vistas of breathtaking scenery, giving you perfect photo opportunities of stunning waterfalls and ancient landforms, all with the doors off!

Thousands of years of erosion have shaped Litchfield's amazing landscape, and it is a photographer's delight. Each of the five NT Air exhilarating itineraries and three ground add-on tours provide uninterrupted views of Litchfield's most coveted waterfalls, landmarks and formations. Longer tours also showcase the extraordinary floodplain and river system and historic sites, with multiple remote landings and a sense of peaceful isolation. NT Air is a must-see airborne Litchfield experience.
